consider if it does not yet owe a duty to itself and to its honored dead. Official publications have only recently come to my knowledge in which, aside from personal errors that need not be noticed, there appears a strange distortion of facts as to when the several parts of the army of the Ohio became engaged with the enemy on the 6th and 7th of April 1862. An old book of my own, 'Ohio in the War,' printed long before the official reports were accessible, is quoted as one authority for these statements, but in some few cases I have already been able to collate, they agree neither with that work nor with the official reports, nor with themselves, and the time when certain regiments went into action is set down, on the very monuments the State has erected on the spot, three or four hours after they had been hotly engaged and the field had been well nigh regained. Whether this is due to a blundering effort to shield names which need no such treacherous props to their solid renown and to do it at the expense of the army of the Ohio, or whether it is due to mere ircompetence, the effect is the same. Can your society, in loyalty to liself and to its martyrs on that field, permit these misrepresentations to stand? Believe me, with renewed thanks and regrets, very sincerely yours,

WHITELAW REID.

A burst of cheers followed the readof the letters. "The Grand Army of the Republic," the subject of an address by Commander-In-Chief Blackmar, of the G. A. R., ellcited great applause. Gen. C. H. Grosvenor of Ohio also spoke. The exercises closed with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banter".
